Unit 9 — Youth and the Future

Track G+M · Klasse 10 · Niveau G/M

Learning objectives I

- I can read a short text on a youth-led initiative and identify the main claim and one piece of evidence.
- *I can use future perfect (by 2030, I will have …) and future continuous (next year I will be …).*
- I can write a 200-word reflection on a youth-led future scenario.

Lead-in I

Sam read about a 17-year-old in Glasgow who has been running a community garden on a derelict industrial site for two years. By 2030, the project will have trained over 200 young volunteers. Sam's first reaction was that's intimidating. His second reaction was that's encouraging. His third reaction, on reflection, was both, depending on the day.

Reading I

Reading — The Glasgow Garden Project
The Glasgow Garden Project began in 2024 on a half-acre derelict industrial site. By 2030, the project will have trained over 200 young volunteers in small-scale urban food growing. Next year alone, the team will be running weekend workshops for primary-school groups. The founder, who started the project at 15, says the most useful skill she has gained is what she calls small repeated public asking — the willingness to keep asking adults for things they could easily say no to.

Grammar — future perfect + future continuous
Future perfect (will have + past participle) — actions completed by a future time:

- Next year the team will be running workshops.
- In 2030 I will be living in another city, probably.

Sample

The Glasgow Garden Project, which began in 2024 on a derelict industrial site, will have trained over 200 young volunteers by 2030. Next year alone, the team will be running weekend workshops for primary-school groups. The most striking thing about the founder, who started at 15, is what she calls 'small repeated public asking'. According to her, the actual skill of youth leadership is not vision; it is patience with the awkwardness of asking adults for things they could easily refuse. By the time I am 23, I will have either started something small or watched the chance pass. By 2030, I hope I will be doing something — even on a half-acre, even badly at first. The project has shown me that the unit of change is not the grand speech but the small request, repeated until someone says yes.

Reflect I

- I can identify the main claim and one piece of evidence in a youth-led text.
- I can use future perfect and future continuous.
- I can write a 200-word reflection on a future scenario.
