

Unit 10 — A Short Novel

Track E • Klasse 10 • Niveau E

Niveau E

1. Reading

Read the text, then answer in full sentences.

By the third week, the bus stop had become a small kingdom. The same six people, every weekday morning, in the same approximate order. Anya, who could predict each arrival down to the second, had stopped predicting; the predictability itself had become the comfort. Nevertheless, on Wednesday, one of the six was missing. Anya did not yet know that the missing person was the one who had, without telling anyone, been keeping the kingdom together.

2. Practise

1. Match: however → formal; though → everyday; nevertheless → formal.
2. Choose register: (in a literary essay) → __; (in dialogue) → __.
3. Build 3 essay sentences (formal) + 3 narrative sentences (everyday).

3. Write

Literary essay, 300 words. Read the extract. Answer: Who is Anya? What is the arc? What is the theme? Which two stylistic moves do the most work? Use 2 quotes + 1 cleft + 2 academic register markers.

Lösungen Controlled. 1. all true.

2. however / though.

Productive. 3. Open.

T1. third week; six; stopped predicting — predictability became the comfort; one missing.

T2. bus stop, third week of mornings; she stopped predicting because she had finally trusted the rhythm; the missing person had been keeping the kingdom together; the chapter ends on the reveal of that person's role.

T3. It was the predictability that had become the comfort. It was the missing person who had been keeping the kingdom together. however / though.

T4. Open.