2. Reading

Read the text, then answer in full sentences.

Most viral claims feel true because they fit a pattern we already believe. The fact-checker's job is small but stubborn: ask three questions. Where is this from? What is the actual evidence? What would change my mind? If a claim cannot survive these questions, it does not belong in your shareable list.

3. Practise

1. Match: peer-reviewed → expert-checked; primary source → original; debunked → shown false.
2. Choose cautious phrase: (my own claim) → ___ ; (another expert's claim) → ___ .
3. Build 4 cautious-claim sentences from a real or imagined news topic.

4. Write

Media-literacy review, 180 words. Pick a viral claim. Apply the three-question check. Use 4 cautious-claim phrases.

Lösungen G. 1. all true.

2. In my view / Studies indicate that.
