Unit 9 — Short Fiction in the Classroom

Track G+M · Klasse 9 · Niveau G/M

Learning objectives I

- I can read a short story and identify protagonist, conflict, theme, and one stylistic choice.
- I can use the past perfect with by the time / before / after.
- I can write a 180-word literary response.

Lead-in I

Mr. Yilmaz handed out a one-page short story called The Found Letter. ”Read it twice,” he said. ”Once for the plot, once for the writing.” The first read took eleven minutes. The second took twenty-three.

Reading I

Reading — The Found Letter (extract)
By the time June found the letter, her grandmother had been dead for six years. The letter was sealed and unaddressed. It had been written, June was almost certain, in the days before her grandmother had stopped writing entirely. The handwriting was the same — except for one shaky line at the end, which June read three times before she put the letter back into the box. She did not open it that Tuesday. By the next Sunday, she had decided.

Grammar — past perfect with time conjunctions
Use past perfect for the earlier of two past events.

Reading II

- By the time June found the letter, her grandmother had been dead for six years.
- Before she opened it, she had read it three times.
- After she had decided, she stopped checking the box.

Practise I

Niveau G

1. Past perfect: (by the time / I / arrive / the film / start) → ___ .
2. Choose tense: When she found the letter, her grandmother _____ (be) dead for six years. (was / had been)

Niveau M

3. Build 3 past-perfect sentences from a story of your choice (real or invented).

Your turn I

Literary response, 180 words. Read the extract above. Answer in writing: Who is June? What is the conflict? What is the theme? Which one detail is doing the most work? Use 3 past-perfect structures.

Sample

By the time June found the letter, her grandmother had been dead for six years. June is, I imagine, someone in her late teens — old enough to be trusted with the box, young enough that the loss still moves through her unfinished. The conflict is small but heavy: she must decide whether to open the letter. The theme is what the dead leave us, and what we owe them. The detail that does the most work is the shaky line at the end — three words that tell us this letter was written in a body already failing. The past perfect throughout the passage builds the layered time the story needs: the grandmother had stopped writing, the letter had been written, June had read it three times. By the next Sunday, she had decided. The story trusts us not to ask, yet, what she decided.

Your turn II

Reflect I

- I can identify protagonist, conflict, theme, one stylistic choice.
- I can use past perfect with time conjunctions.
- I can write a 180-word literary response.

Further reading / listening I

- Project Gutenberg — short stories at A2/B1 level.
- Penguin Modern Classics — extracts and notes.
