Sample

At the start of Klasse 9, I wrote in short sentences that did the same thing twice. By December I had started to write longer sentences with a turn in the middle. The piece I am proudest of is the application letter — the formal register felt strange but I understood why it was needed by the third draft. The piece that didn't work was my Canada reflection — I tried to cover too much. If I rewrote it now, I would pick one detail and stay with it. The biggest thing I learned this year is that careful first drafts save more time than fast ones, and that a good question is worth ten paragraphs of answer.
